Hosted by the University of Nebraska – Lincoln, the 2019 Social Psychology and Law Preconference features the role of social psychology in law worldwide. Presenters will review research pertaining to social psychology and law in North America, Europe and nations throughout the world. Presenters will discuss how and why social psychology can and should influence civil law, criminal law, legal process, and dispute resolution.

The Preconference will also include:

- Poster sessions with the latest research in Social Psychology and Law
- 10-minute datablitz presentations from promising scholars
- Breakfast and lunch included with Preconference registration

Preconference registration is currently open.

Register at: http://meeting.spsp.org/registration

Questions? Please contact us at socialpsychandlaw@gmail.com

For more information, visit:
http://meeting.spsp.org/preconferences/law

Sponsored by the University of Nebraska – Lincoln